In April Pope Benedict XVI approved the findings of a report by the International Theological Commission, a Vatican advisory body, which found grounds that the souls of unbaptised children would go to heaven, thus revising traditional teaching on Limbo. Lastly, as a supplement to this work with regard to many apparently unvindicated positions, I refer to my articles in the Deutsches Jahrbuch, January and February to my critiques and Charakteristiken des modernen Afterchristenmus in previous numbers of the same periodical, Christianity - the Original and the Present Reality to my earlier works, especially the following: - P. Unbaptised babies The concept of 'Limbo' One of the biggest problems the Catholic Church faced over the years was the problem of children who died before they were baptised.
